This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

+ Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
+ Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
+ Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
+ Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

PREFACE.

Many readers come to this Society's Library for biographic information concerning the pioneer settlers and prominent citizens of Minnesota, and it has often required much search to find the information desired. Therefore the present work was undertaken to bring into a single volume, in alphabetic order, brief notes of the biographies of Minnesota people, gathered from the many books, pamphlets, newspapers, and other records, in which these have been published.

About two hundred and fifty sources of this information, in some cases comprising a series of many volumes, have been examined in the compilation of this work. Among these sources are national and state collections of biographies; many historical and biographical volumes and pamphlets relating to counties, cities, and towns of Minnesota; histories and military records of the state; publications relating to its educational institutions, the professions of law and medicine, religious denominations, and various associations and fraternities; magazines and journals; personal memoirs; family genealogies; and scrap-books, and the files of our state newspapers.

Each volume and pamphlet, or each series of several or many volumes under one title, has received a reference number, designated in the following list; and after each biography throughout this work its derivation is shown by these numerical references. The reader desiring more full information of any biography is thus guided to the book, pamphlet, or newspaper volume, in the Historical Library, or often to several of these publications, where additional biographic details, and frequently very interesting comments in approbation or criticism, are found.

Constant care has been taken to note correctly the dates and places of birth and death, the year when pioneers and settlers came to Minnesota, places of residence, occupation or profession, public services, etc. From so many and diverse sources, however, it is probable that occasional errors in dates and other statements may occur; but it is believed that in nearly all instances these are referable to the original sources of the information, rather than to inaccurate compilation.

The scope of this work includes the early explorers, fur traders, and missionaries, from Groseilliers and Radisson, Du Luth, Hennepin, and Le Sueur, onward to the organization of Minnesota as a Territory in 1849, and to her admission into the Union as a State in 1858. For the period since 1849, the compilation has been necessarily limited to men and women of prominence in the territory and state, or in their communities, whose biographies have appeared in print; but it is true that many other useful and highly honored citizens have had no published record. In a few instances, when sketches could not be found but were deemed especially desirable and needful, they have been supplied by correspondence or interviews.

Chiefs and otherwise noteworthy persons among the aboriginal peoples, the Ojibways and the Sioux, are also included, whenever definite biographic information could be obtained.

More than 14,000 biographic sketches have been gathered in the manuscript series for this volume, and this entire series is preserved for reference in the Historical Library; but it has been practicable to publish in this book of convenient size only about 9,000 of these sketches.

A large number of biographies of Minnesota persons prominent in the professions, in public services, and in the commerce and industries of the state, were published in 1907 in two books, numbered 24 and 25 in the following list of sources of this volume. As both these books are in the principal public libraries, where they may be consulted, the greater part of their biographies are omitted from this work, which has been mainly restricted, in its references for numbers 24 and 25, to those biographies that are also received into our manuscript compilation from other sources. About 3,500 sketches in these two recent publications, omitted here, form a very important and valuable supplement of the present collection.

This compilation has been brought together from more than 1,000 books and pamphlets, including several large series which are each listed with only a single reference number.

In this Society's scrap-books, a series of sixty-eight volumes of newspaper articles and items published from 1861 to the present time, many newspapers from all parts of the state have supplied biographic sketches used here.

Files of several early newspapers of Minnesota have also been thoroughly examined to obtain their items of biographies; and this search has been carried through the whole series of our oldest newspaper, the Minnesota Pioneer, and its continuations in the Pioneer and Democrat and the Pioneer Press, from 1849 to 1912. About two hundred and fifty bound newspaper volumes have been thus examined for their contributions to this work.

It is hoped that this collection of Minnesota Biographies found in so many publications, brought here into one alphabetic list for convenient reference, will be of great and permanent value to all classes of our people who may wish to acquaint themselves with our state history.

Through its numerical references, with notation of portraits by the asterisk (*), this work supplies a comprehensive index to the wide range of biographic literature of Minnesota, and to the printed portraits of her most noteworthy people.

It will be especially helpful in researches for several papers relating to the sources of immigration to this state, both from foreign countries and from the older eastern and southern states of this Union, with discussion of the contributions by each country and state to the founding and upbuilding of Minnesota, desired for later volumes in these Historical Collections.

Another use of this book will be to aid statisticians and students of social science in many investigations of the evolution of the composite qualities characterizing the people of the North Star State.

ADDITIONS AND CORRECTIONS.

Many of the persons whose biographic sketches are gathered in this volume have died since the sources whence it is compiled were published. Information of their place and date of death is requested to be sent to the Secretary of this Society for notation in its Library.

Such additional notes have been inserted throughout this work for a considerable number who have died during the time of its printing, but several of these for the earlier parts of the volume are given in the ensuing list. Others are also here noted whose deaths, though occurring longer ago, have come to our knowledge since their places in the printing were passed.

A few corrections and added sketches are also included in this list; and the Secretary will thank any readers who will send needed corrections for preservation and reference.

"The Aborigines of Minnesota, a Report based on the collections of Jacob V. Brower, and on the field surveys and notes of Alfred J. Hill and Theodore H. Lewis, collated, augmented and described by N. H. Winchell," published in 1911 by this Historical Society, forms a quarto volume of 761 pages, with many halftone page plates and more than 500 plats of groups of aboriginal mounds surveyed in this state. Histories of the Sioux and Ojibways of Minnesota are given in this report, with many portraits. It also contains, in pages 707-731, an alphabetic list of about 1,500 personal names of Ojibways who have borne some part in Minnesota history, with citations of publications in which they are mentioned. Biographic sketches, however, are not presented, excepting for Brower, Hill, and Lewis, with portraits, in the preface.

The present work was originally undertaken in connection with the compilation of another volume, "Minnesota Geographic Names," for this Society's Collections. In that further volume, on which much progress has been made, it is planned to give the origin, meaning, and date, so far as can be ascertained, of our place names, as of the state, its counties and townships, cities, villages, railway stations, post offices, creeks, rivers and lakes, hills and mountains, and the streets and parks in cities. Many personal notes and frequent sketches of the early explorers, first settlers, and prominent citizens, commemorated by these names, are being thus gathered, considerably extending the biographic records of Minnesota.

When the foregoing pages, the latest to be printed in this long work, were at their final proof-reading, this Society's Library received the new Volume VII of No. 17 in our sources of compilation. This new edition of the most serviceable collection of biographies of living men and women in the United States has about twenty for Minnesota that were not in its former editions nor in this compilation, to which accordingly they are here added.
